ATT: Serious Fraud.

I do apologise, we forgot to attach the audio tape as verbal evidence to back up the written evidence.

Researcher, Wayne Duggan was speaking to your secretary and apologising for the audio tape not arriving with the file. We forward the copy on, and you would have heard certain Members of Parliament, joking about whose Party was at fault back then.

Treason was brought up on three occasions to Members in Parliament, along with a caveat on the day. Funny thing, they are doing the same thing today. "What's that saying"? (A leopard never changes its spots.)

The same audio tape was past on to the Solicitor General to be addressed. You will see, she chose not to.

When did the Solicitor General's roll change, from representing the Crown to representing Members of Parliament?

This brings me to the question on the whereabouts of your inquiry? I gather that the investigation is going well, for you have not required any further evidence.

We have asked the Governor General and the Auditor General to investigate, also waiting on their response.

We were informed by Her Majesty, the Queen's Secretary, when asking Her Majesty to address the serious issues that's been presented as evidence, in connection with our Government conspiring to go against the Crown. Any complaint is refer back to the Governor General and it's Ministers from that country, where the complaint originated from.

So you know where we are going next, as you have the paperwork to prove that Ministers of Parliament refuses to address the evidence.

Look forward to your response on your progress report.

Yours sincerely

Tanya Peterson
